

(Common) Sense and (Extreme) Sensibility Poetry Reading

Poems by: Vicent Andrés Estellés, Josep Carner, Salvador Espriu,
Gabriel Ferrater, Manuel Forcano, Ausiàs March, Melcior Mateu, Marta Pessarrodona, Francesc
Parcerisas, Carles Riba

Poets House
72 Spring street, 2nd Floor
New York City
February 11, 2006

(Common) Sense and (Extreme) Sensibility

Poetry Reading

Poems by: Vicent Andrés Estellés, Josep Carner, Salvador Espriu,
Gabriel Ferrater, Manuel Forcano, Ausias March, Melcior Mateu,
Marta Pessarrodona, Francesc
Parcerisas, Carles Riba

Ausias March (1400-1459)

Translation by Angela Buxton

XLVI

Veles e vents han mos designs complir, faent camins dubtosos per la mar.
Mestre i ponent contra d'ells veig armar; xaloc, llevant, los deuen subvenir ab llurs amics lo grec e lo migjorn, fent humils precs al vent tramuntanal que en son bufar los sia parcial e que tots cinc complequesquen mon retorn.

Bullirà el mar com la cassola en forn, mudant color e l'estat natural, e mostrrà voler tota res mal que sobre si atur un punt al jorn.
Grans e pocs peixs a recors correran e cercaran amagatalls secrets:
fugint al mar, on són nodrits e fets, per gran remei en terra eixiran.

Amor de vós jo en sent més que no en sé,
de què la part pitjor me'n romandrà;
e de vós sap lo qui sens vós està.
A joc de daus vos accompararé.

Io tem la mort per no ser-vos absent, perquè amor per mort és anul·lat: mas jo no creu que mon voler sobrat pusca esser per tal departiment.
Jo só gelós de vostre escàs voler, que, jo morint, no meta mi en oblit.
Sol est pensar me tol del món delit, car nós vivint, no creu se pusca fer:

après ma mort, d'amar perdau poder, e sia tost en ira convertit.
E, jo forçat d'aquest món ser eixit, tot lo meu mal serà vós no veer.

Amor, de vós jo en sent més que no en sé,
de què la part pitjor me'n romandrà,
e de vós sap lo qui sens vós està:
A joc de daus vos accompararé.

XLVI

Sails and winds will achieve my desires, making doubtful ways upon the sea.
Mestre and Ponent against them I see rise, Xaloc, Llevant must now be helping them with their friends, Grec and Migjorn, humbly praying the Tramuntana wind in its blowing to be partial to them so that all five achieve my safe return.

The sea shall boil like a crock in the oven changing her colour and her natural state, she will show how she hates all that stop upon her an instant in the day.
The large and the small fish will seek shelter and search for a secret hiding-place:
fleeing the sea where they were born and raised, they have no choice but to come to earth.

Love, of you I feel more than I know, of which the worst will be my lot;
and he who is without you knows you.
I will compare you to a game of dice.

I fear death for the absence it means, for love is annulled by death; but I don't believe my wanting can be overcome by such a parting.
I am jealous of your lack of love for me and that if I'm dead you might forget me.
This thought takes away my joy in the world —for while we live, I don't think it will happen—after my death, you might lose all power to love, and suddenly it might turn into hatred.

And I being forced to leave this world, my sorrow will be not to see you.

Love, of you I feel more than I know, of which the worst shall be my lot;
and who is without you knows you.
I will compare you to a game of dice.

Absència

No cal que tanqui les parpelles.
 El que és remot se'm fa present.
 Veig casa meva. Lentament en la penombra t'esbadelles, oh quietíssim finestró;

 sospira a penes la cortina, llu delicada la vitrina, plora una rosa de tardor.

Tant de silenci m'encomana un pensament de fred molt fi; no vull obrir la persiana closa davant del meu jardí, car com aquell que d'aquest viure és ja passat, i no s'ho creu i va al mirall amb un somriure i n'és enfront i no s'hi veu, fins si prop meu l'amor venia, com avançant-se a mon albir, sols l'esperit la sotjaria:

 mai en sos ulls no sorprendria ni el meu esguard ni el meu sospir.

Absence

No need for closing eyelids.
 What's far is now made present.
 I can see my house. The quietest window unfolding,

slowly, in the shade;
 the curtain barely sighs,
 the glass gleams gently, an autumn rose is weeping.

So much silence commends to me a thought of most delicate cold; I'd rather not open the blind closed upon the garden.

For like one who's passed already out of life, and can't believe it, and goes smiling to the mirror and, confronting it, sees no one there, even if love drew near to me, as to anticipate my will,

 spirit alone might wait upon it; never in those eyes could startle any sigh or glance of mine.

8

Que jo no sigui més com un ocell tot sol, ales esteses sobre un gran riu per on davallen lentes barques de gent que riu a l'ombra baixa del tenderol, i el rai que el muntanyenc mig nu, enyoradís, mena amb fatiga cap a ciutats que estrenyen l'aigua lliure entre molls oblidats d'haver-hi comes verdes amb arbres i ramats i un cloqueret feliç.

La vida passa, i l'ull no es cansa d'abocar imatges clares dintre del cor.
 ... Tot en mi torna somni: nuvolet d'ombra i d'or que flota i fina lluny de la mà.
 Qui endinsa en el seu cor com un minaire avar, qui de recança ulls clucs es peix, tenen més que no jo, que estrany a mi mateix i alt sobre els altres, guaito l'ona incessant com creix i minva cap al mar.

¿Quin moviment humà pot encara desfer l'encant, llançar-me sang i sentits a la presa, que és nostra, afanyada, entre els dits, o al cant, que d'home a home va i ve?
 ¿O ha d'ésser mon destí el de l'ocell reial que un tret, per folga, tomba del cel, i l'aigua indiferent l'endú, vençut rebel, cobrint-se amb l'ala inútil els ulls buidats d'anhel, sense un plany pel seu mal?

8

No more than a bird aloft alone am I, wings spread over the wide river where the boats pass slowly full of laughing people in the soft shade of the awnings, and a mountaineer, half-naked and nostalgic, wearily conducts his raft towards the cities that comb the open water between piers forgetful of how there once were green hills of trees and sheep and a happy steeple.

Life passes, and the eye never tires of taking clear images into the heart.
 All in me becomes a dream: a little cloud of shadow and gold that floats and dies out far from my hand.
 He who dives into his heart like a greedy miner, or who from sorrow shuts himself up in there like a fish, has more than I who, estranged from myself, high above the others, watches the ceaseless wave as it grows and diminishes in the sea.

What human motion has yet to undo this spell, to throw me with blood and feeling to the catch, our own, that we earned, between our fingers, or to the song, that from man to man comes and goes?
 Or does my destiny have to be that of the regal bird that in one shot, like a joke, falls from the sky, carried away by the indifferent water, a defeated rebel, one useless wing covering his eyes emptied of desire, without a single complaint for his suffering?

Inici de càantic en el temple

*A Raimon, amb el meu agraït aplaudiment.
Homenatge a Salvat-Papasseit.*

Ara digueu: «La ginesta floreix, arreu als camps hi ha vermell de roselles.
Amb nova falç comencem a segar el blat madur i, amb ell, les males herbes.» Ah, joves llavis desclosos després de la foscor, si sabíeu com l'alba ens ha trigat, com és llarg d'esperar un alçament de llum en la tenebra!
Però hem viscut per salvar-vos els mots, per retornar-vos el nom de cada cosa, perquè seguissiu el recte camí d'accés al ple domini de la terra.
Varem mirar ben al lluny del desert, davallàvem al fons del nostre somni.
Cisternes seques esdevenen cims pujats per esglaons de lentes hores.
Ara digueu: «Nosaltres escoltem les veus del vent per l'alta mar d'espigues.» Ara digueu: «Ens mantindrem fidels per sempre més al servei d'aquest poble.»

Beginning of Canticle in the Temple

Now say: "The broom tree blooms, everywhere the fields are red with poppies.
With new scythes we'll thresh the ripened wheat and weeds." Ah, young lips parting after dark, if you only knew how dawn delayed us, how long we had to wait for light to rise in the gloom!
But we have lived to save your words, to return you the name of every thing, so that you'd stay on the straight path that leads to the mastery of earth.
We looked beyond the desert, plumbed the depth of our dreams, turned dry cisterns into peaks scaled by the long steps of time.
Now say: "We hear the voices of the wind on the high sea of crested grain." Now say: "We shall be ever faithful to the people of this land."

Cambra de la tardor

La persiana, no del tot tancada, com un esglai que es reté de caure a terra, no ens separa de l'aire. Mira, s'obren trenta-set horitzons rectes i primis, però el cor els obliga. Sense enyor se'ns va morint la llum, que era color de mel, i ara és color d'olor de poma. Que lent el món, que lent el món, que lenta la pena per les hores que se'n van de pressa. Digues, te'n recordaràs d'aquesta cambra?

“Me l'estimo molt.

Aquelles veus d'obrers – Què són?”

Paletes:

manca una casa a la mançana.

“Canten,

i avui no els sento. Criden, riuen, i avui que callen em fa estrany.”

Que lentes

les fulles roges de les veus, que incertes quan vénen a colgar-nos. Adormides, les fulles dels meus besos van colgant els recers del teu cos, i mentre oblidades les fulles altes de l'estiu, els dies oberts i sense besos, ben al fons el cos recorda: encara tens la pell mig del sol, mig de la lluna.

Autumn Room

The blind not fully closed, like a sudden fear held back from falling, does not separate us from the open air. Look, there are thirty-seven neatly ruled horizons, yet the heart dismisses them. Without regret the light recedes, the honey-coloured light is now the colour of the scent of apples. How slow the world, how slow the world, how slow one's grief for the hours that quickly slip away. Will you recall this room? “I'm fond of it. What are those workmen's voices?”

Builder's men.

The block still lacks one house.

“They sing,
but today I hear no sound. They shout and laugh, and now they're silent it seems strange.”

How slow

the red leaves of the voices, how uncertainly they come to cover us. As if in sleep, the leaves of my kisses cover by degrees your body's secret hiding places and, while you forget the tall midsummer leaves, the expanse of days we didn't kiss, deep down the body recollects: your skin retains one half of the sun, one half of the moon.

XXI

Com hi ha el fill sense els pares i els pares sense el fill i xiques, al cinema, amb les cames obertes i una mà entre les cuixes, i el rosari en família, i hi ha el peó que es mata caent des d'un andami i l'home que fa el pa i hi ha qui porta un metre per saber el tamany escaient del taüt i com hi ha els tramviaires que treballen la nit de cap d'any i els forats de les piques i hi ha l'ascensor amb un llum brut groguenc esperant mentrestant la portera s'emborratxa de vi i pixa per l'escala i la filla té por i el marit està fent-ho amb la dona del metge i els tramvies terribles amb l'enrenou dels ferros i el metge que es dedica a trencar les anous mentrestant la portera va pixant per l'escala i trucant a les portes amb un cop de mamella i el fill de la de l'arpa que s'ha mort fa tres dies plora i plora i encén un ciri i posa el ciri a l'ampolla del vi i contempla la Loren i llavors la suïssa crida pel passadís i el cosí la segueix brandant el canelobre i la xica que es gita més aviat que mai i un fred com una mà li puja per les cuixes i hi ha un instant que pensa que té el cul més petit i els veïns que s'han mort els dos intoxicats l'altre dia i la dona i la filla no tenen ganas de menjar res i ploren com les rates i el cosí i la suïssa que dormen brutalment i el canelobre encès i el cobertor encès les cortines enceses i tot el pis encès els nobles cavallers enterrats en els claustres mentrestant la portera pixa pels escalons i el marit no pot més i la dona del metge se'n va i agafa el metge i li diu fill de puta i se'l fica entre cames i tot es pega foc i la nena que plora sola a la porteria i les inscripcions obscenes als comuns i el crani rebotant per tots els escalons.

XXI

Since there are children without parents and parents without children, and girls at the movies with hands buried between their thighs, and a rosary at home and the foot-soldier killed in a fall from the battlements and the man who bakes bread and the one who carries a yardstick to take measurements for coffins and since there are streetcar drivers who work New Year's Eve and drains in sinks and there's the elevator with its dirty yellowish light waiting while the concierge gets drunk on wine and pisses down the stairwell and her daughter's scared and her husband's doing it with the doctor's wife and the terrible streetcars with their metallic clang and the doctor's busy cracking walnuts while the concierge keeps on pissing down the stairwell banging her tits against the doors and the son of the lady harpist who died three days ago weeps and weeps and lights a candle and sticks it in a wine bottle and contemplates Sophia Loren and the Swiss girl calls down the hallway and the cousin follows her brandishing the candelabra and the girl who goes to bed earlier and earlier and a chill like a hand creeps up her thighs and for a second she thinks her ass has gotten smaller and the neighbors who both died of poisoning the other day and the woman and her daughter don't feel like eating and whimper like rats and the cousin and the Swiss girl sleep brutally and the candelabra's burning and the bedspread's burning those noble knights buried in cloisters while the concierge pisses down the stairs and the husband's worn out and the doctor's wife leaves and grabs the doctor and calls him a bastard and sticks him between her thighs and everything catches fire and the dirty pictures in the toilets and the skull bouncing down the steps.

Pare, el dolor

Pare, el dolor no calia, ni les agulles punitives ni el xerric de les dents en vida, ni la suor freda ni el tumor fosfòric, ni la nafra que va estenent-se com un llac nocturn.

El que volies sentir, dels nostres llavis, t'ho hauríem dit millor sense sanglots;
 la teva casa llunya l'hauríem trobada, també, només pujant.

La llum de la finestra eterna rere la qual llegeixes desvetllat, per esperar-nos, el llibre dels nascuts, era prou resplendent dalt del turó i la nit perquè no ens desviéssim mai i t'arribéssim al cercle magnànim del sopar amb la puntualitat exacta de la mort. No, Pare, el dolor no calia.

Father, pain

Father, pain was uncalled-for, so were punitive needles, the gnashing of teeth in life, cold seats, phosphoric tumors and wounds that spread like a lake at night.

What you wanted to hear from our lips we would have said better without sobbing; we would have found
 your distant home, also, by just rising.

The light in the eternal window behind which you wait up for us reading the book of the born was bright enough on the hilltop at night so that we would have never lost our way and reached the magnanimous circle for supper as strictly punctual as death. No, Father, pain was uncalled-for.

Anna Gorenko

Després, sense el teu talent, totes hem estat, més o menys,
mig monges i mig putas, mig de claustre, mig de carrer.

No hem tingut el teu pudor:
ens ha mancat l'enginy
del secret gentilici, el talent de sonora màscara.

El meu poeta no valorava ni paons blancs,
ni músia de missa,
ni rebregats mapes.

Com el teu, però,
la mainada cridanera l'atabalava, i no es delia ni pel te amb melmelada ni per histèriques dames.

El nostre temps, ben cert, no ha estat tan patètic com el teu.
Per aquesta raó, potser, T'hem de retre homenatge;
més encara pel teu vers, d'agulles tan daurades;
per la teva saviesa,
que ni les traïcions amaguen.

També perquè t'han cantat més que tots els versos que vas escriure; tan gelosos, que volien immortalitzar-te amb llapis i pinzell i càmeres;

i perquè sempre seràs tan lluny i tan a prop de les nostres conquestes, de les nostres davallades.

Després, sense el teu talent,
totes en hem sentit com tu,
mig monges i mig putas,
tant dies, tan repetides vegades.

Anna Gorenko

Since then, without your talent, we have all been, mostly,
half nuns, half whores,
half-way between the cloister and the street.

We have not had your prudishness:
we lacked the armour
of a secret name,
the wisdom of our mask of sound.

My poet does not value
white peacocks,
religious music,
crumpled maps.

Like yours, though,
screaming children annoyed him, and he had no taste for tea with marmalade or hysterical ladies.

Our time has certainly not been as terrible as yours.
Perhaps this is why
we pay you homage;
how much more
for your poems of golden spires; for your wisdom
which note even the treacherous deny.

You have inspired more poems than you ever wrote;
envious artists have wanted to immortalise you with penises, brushes and cameras; and because you will always be so near and so far away from all our triumphs and our failures.

Since then, without your talent,
We have all felt like you
half nuns, half whores
on so many days, at so many times.

Translation by Theo Dorgan

Bella Dama Coneguda*i. m. Amàlia Soler*

Us veig en una foto antiga: éreu jove i bella
i díueu el poeta, aleshores infant, en braços.

L'escena era bonica
i amagava el déu salvatge: divinitat abastament venerada per vós i la vostra nissaga.

El meu record d'aquella tarda —d'aquella foto esgrogueïda—us fa amb un capell i un avió —de quan en deien aeroplà— de paisatge.

M'apreciàeu perquè jo l'estimava i jo us volia per estimar-lo, per fer més clares unes ombres que m'enterbolien certes imatges.

També us hauria volgut salvar, com a ell, de les grapes inevitables.
Volia tornar-vos al retrat on ell era innocent i vós jove i mundana.

Tots dos desapareguéreu sense acomiadar-vos, deixant-me només el record, aquest caos on he de cercar, sola, les personnes per estimar-vos.

Belle Dame Connue*i. m. Amàlia Soler*

I see you in an old photograph: you were young and beautiful and you held the poet, then an infant, in your arms.

The scene was glamorous and concealed the savage god:
a deity worshipped to the full by you and yours.

My memory of that afternoon —of that sallow photograph has you in a beautiful hat with an airplane —when they were called aeroplanes— as a backdrop.

You were fond of me because I loved him and I clung to you to go on loving him, to shed light on shadows that had dimmed certain images.

I would have liked to save you, the same as him, from the avoidless jaws.
I wanted to put you back into that picture where he was hurtless and you, young and worldly.

You both disappeared without saying goodbye, leaving my only memories, this chaos where, all alone, I must find the people to love the two of you through.

Translation by D. Sam Abrams

Objectes

Allò que més va costar de decidir va ser que li traguessin l'anell; no perquè tingués cap valor especial o s'hagués de fondre al crematori, sinó perquè la mare pogués tenir algun record tangible. Hi penso ara que veig l'arracada al costat del llit: un altre objecte que m'és estrany i que és una part de tu. Ens preocupa que el petit no se la fiqui a la boca, però envejo aquestes coses, més enllà dels sentiments; fredes sempre i sempre pròximes i nostres.
 Com un hoste adquirit i complaent amb qui no discutim, instal·lat per sempre allò on no cal misteri: al lòbul jove, al turmell adolescent, als dits dels morts.
 Que en aquestes ratlles que et deixo hi trobis, doncs, els mots desats amb cura: només meus, secrets, perquè els obris quan el foc se t'endugui els meus records.

Objects

The hardest decision was what to do with the ring; not because it had any special value or it was a shame to consign it to the crematorium's blast, but because mother might hope to retain some tangible memory. I think about it now that I spot
 an earring by the side of the bed: another object that seems peculiar now but is a part of you. We worry the little one will put it in this mouth, but I envy these things far beyond emotions;
 always chilly, intimate,
 very much our own—
 like an acquired and compliant host we never discuss, installed forever there where mysteries are not even needed:
 on a youthful earlobe,
 an adolescent ankle,
 on a dead man's fingers.
 In these lines that I leave, you'll find words kept with love secrets belonging only to me, for you to read them when fire will already have removed me from your memory.

Translation by Cyrus Cassells

Retrat del poeta

Xiula el vent, l'aigua s'ha glaçat a les canonades, neva.
 Fa hores que és fosc
 i es formen caramells de gel a les teulades.
 Que n'és de bo tancar el llibre, bufar la bugia que crema sobre la taula i, a la claror de la llar de foc, arraulir-se al llit, sense fer sorolls, per no desvetllar el son d'aquest cos jove que ja fa estona que descansa, pur.
 Ara, colgat sota les flassades, tanca els ulls i rememora aquest dia no gaire diferent de tots els altres.
 Frueix d'aquest petit moment de plaer que tot s'ho val, abandonant la mà sobre un pit que sospira, adormit, la cara en la tofa flonja dels cabells.
 Serà així, la mort?
 Benvinguda com aquesta son que et pren, Dolcíssima, sense retrets ni greuges, agraint només els dons incommensurables de la vida?
 Serà així que, en el camí de la fosca, anirem a l'encontre de la llum?

Portrait of the Poet

The wind howls, the water is frozen thick in the pipes, it is snowing.
 For hours it has been dark and icicles taper downwards from the eaves.
 Ah, how good it is to close your book, snuff out the candle that flickers on the table and, in the light afforded by the fireplace, curl up in bed, without making a sound, not to awaken this youthful body that lies, in all its purity, fast asleep.
 Now, buried under the blankets, close your eyes and in your mind re-enact this day not so different from all others.
 Savor this tiny moment of enjoyment that makes everything worthwhile, as you lay your hand upon this sighing brest, deep in sleep, your face lost among the soft flowing strands of hair.
 Will it be this way, death?
 Welcome like this drowsiness that overtakes you, this sensation of utter mildness, devoid of reproach or grievance, grateful alone for the incommensurable gifts of life?
 Will it be like this that on our way to darkness we will meet with light?

Translated by S. D. Abrams

No sento en mi el dolor, el sento en tu

No sento en mi el dolor, el sento en tu:
 en el bocí de mi que s'allunya, segat, i en el buit que, al capdavall del meu cos, malda inútilment per completar-me.
 Tota jo sóc aquest monyó bolcat com una criatura, que bressolo per fer callar la veu de la ferida...
 I és com si bressolés un infant que ja és mort.

I Do not Feel the Pain in Me, I Feel It in You

I do not feel the pain in me, I feel it in you, in the part of me that's leaving –sliced off– and in the void left deep within my body that struggles uselessly to make me whole.
 I am this stump, swaddled like a baby that I rock to silence the voice of the wound...
 As if were rocking a child that was already dead.

Istambul

No sabia que un dia et compararia a aquesta ciutat.
Tampoc que vindria sol a visitar-la ni que t'escriuria aquesta carta per dir-te que quan fa fred en un país de calor, penso en tu.

Que quan al basar venen fruita que no és de temporada, penso en mi.

Que quan algú paga més del compte i l'estafen perquè no sap el canvi, penso en nosaltres.

Istanbul

I didn't know that one day I'd compare you to this city.
Or that I'd come alone to visit it and I'd be writing you this letter to tell you that when it's cold in a hot country, I think of you.

That when in the bazaar they sell fruit out of season, I think of me.

That when someone pays too much and they cheat him because he doesn't know the change, I think of us.

La caixa negra

He sortit a perfumar el meu cos de qui m'espera. M'he afaitat bé: la mandíbula és terreny de bes.
Sóc una diana que corre cap al dard, aigua de blaurajola de piscina cap al nedador que ha saltat del trampolí.

Si ara fos un avió i m'estavellés, us cegaria, en obrir la meva caixa negra, tanta llum.

Black Box

I've gone out to perfume my body with someone who's waiting for me. I've shaved well: my jaw is terrain of kissing.

I'm the bull's-eye
rushing to the dart, blue-tile water in the pool to the swimmer who's dived from the board.

If I was a plane now and crashed, you would be blinded, on opening my black box, by so much light.

Cercle

El meu amor és una foca que s'adorm, el meu amor és una rosella trasplantada en la tundra.
 De vegades l'he vist: surt a la televisió.
 Hi ha una marca en un banc del parc de la Ciutadella que diu el nom del meu amor.

El meu amor és un grafit al metro.
 El seu nom està escrit a la murada d'Alcúdia, en un paper penjat en un bar d'Estocolm.

«No t'he parlat avui, amor, perquè ets invisibile i, de totes maneres, sempre xerro massa.»

Un núvol sempre indica el lloc on viu el meu amor, a l'estiu i a l'hivern.
 El meu amor és l'últim cercle d'una pedra llençada al llac.
 De tan gran està a punt d'esborrar-se.

Circle

My love is a seal falling asleep, my love is a poppy transplanted to the tundra.
 I see her often: she's on TV.
 Her name is carved into a bench at Ciutadella Park.
 My love is graffiti on the subway.
 Her name is written on a wall in Alcúdia, on a paper hanging in a Stockholm bar.

“I haven't spoken to you today, love, because you're invisible and, anyway, I always talk too much.”

A cloud always shows where my love lives, in summer and winter.
 My love is the last circle of a stone thrown into a lake.
 So wide it's about to vanish.

Rutina

Faig el que fan els pobres: dilluns em toca menjar fetge; dimarts llenties; els dimecres em faig un te amb llimona, em passejo pel Born, recullo mostres de quitina, d'esperma i de verí, llegeixo Kant a alguna biblioteca —no hi ha res tan sublim—, enraono tot sol als bancs del parc, són verds i em coneixen: tinc un amor i dormim plegats a la mateixa màrfega.

Però algun dia res no serà igual, no tindrà límits la meva fortuna:
seran meus tots els mars, el cel i les muntanyes, al meu jardí hi viuran cangurs, seré el somni d'alguns, els Reis Mags es moriran d'enveja, i potser es faran la guerra els meus hereus —amb el vent, amb el foc—de tant com es vendran aquests poemes.

Routine

I do what the poor do: on Mondays it's time to eat liver: Tuesdays lentils; on Wednesdays I make lemon tea, I walk around the Born, collect samples of chitin, sperm and poison, read Kant in some library —there is nothing so sublime—, talk to myself on park benches, they're green and they know me: I have a lover and we sleep together on the same straw mattress.

But one day nothing will be the same, my fortune will be unlimited:
all oceans, mountains and skies will be mine, kangaroos will inhabit my garden, I'll be the dream of some, the Three Wise Men will die of envy and perhaps my heirs will go to war —with wind, with fire—
because these poems will sell so well.

Ausiàs March lived in Valencia at the end of the fourteenth or the start of the fifteenth century, the grandson of a Barcelona notary and son of a cavalier poet. His family prospered as a result of the connection with the king, Pere el Cerimoniós [Peter the Lover of Ceremony], who had raised them to the status of knights. Ausiàs took part in a number of military expeditions. In due course, he was named 'High Falconer of the House of Our Lord the King'. After the death of his second wife, he remained a widower. He had no legitimate offspring, though he is known to have had at least four bastard sons. He died at the age of sixty-two.

Josep Carner (Barcelona, 1884 - Brussels, 1970), is known as «the prince of Catalan poets». He was a renovating influence in poetry, prose and the language itself. He was also a diplomat, working in Genoa, San José de Costa Rica, le Havre, Hendaya, Beirut, Brussels and Paris. Els fruits saborosos (Delicious Fruits), published in 1906, is regarded by the critics as one of the high points of Noucentisme (a Catalan political and cultural movement at the beginning of the 20th century), of which he was in the vanguard. His poetic work moved towards post-symbolism with books such as Auques i ventalls, El cor quiet and Nabí. He was a notable translator of works by writers such as Dickens, Shakespeare, Mark Twain, Arnold Bennett, Musset, Lafontaine, Defoe and Lewis Carroll.

Carles Riba (Barcelona, 1893 - 1959) was a poet, narrator, literary critic, translator and academic. His lyrical production includes, amongst other works, the first books of Estances (Abodes) in 1919, the second book of the same title (1930), Tres suites (1937), Elegies de Bierville (1943), Salvatge cor (Wild Heart) and Esbós de tres oratoris (Outline for Three Oratories) both in 1953. A supporter of the Republic, he went into exile in 1939. From this French exile and then later in Barcelona after his return in 1943, he translated classical works. Amongst his translations, those of Homer's Odyssey, and works by Aeschylus, Hölderlin, Kavafis, Plutarch, Poe, Rilke and Sophocles are particularly noteworthy.

Salvador Espriu (Santa Coloma de Farners, 1913 - Barcelona, 1985) is one of Catalonia's most significant post-war writers and an outstanding poet. Although he first became known as a narrator, his relatively later incursion into poetry was no obstacle to his achieving swift recognition as a poet, not only within the sphere of Catalan letters but also internationally. He also played an important part in the revitalisation of Catalan theatre. He published novels, poetry and collections of stories, among which are Aspectes (1934), Ariadna al laberint grotesc (Ariadna in the Grotesque Labyrinth) (1935), Miratge a Citerea (Mirage in Citerea) (1935). Amongst his published collections of poetry are: El caminant i el mur (The Wanderer and the Wall) (1954), La pell de brau (The Hide of the Bull) (1960) or Llibre de Sinera (The Book of Sinera) (1963).

Vicent Andrés Estellés (1924 – 1993). Poet and journalist. He is considered a principal figure in the revival of contemporary Valencian poetry and the greatest poet to come out of the Valencian Lands from the Fifteenth Century until modern times—that is, since the golden epoch of Ausiàs March and Roís de Corella. Among his books of poetry stands out the second volume of his Obra Completa, Les pedres de l'àmfora (Stones from the Amphora), which won two awards, Lletra d'Or (1974) and Criticà Serra d'Or (1975). Also remarkable are two works that describe the Valencian Lands: Llibre de meravelles (Book of Marvels) and Mural del País Valencià (Mural of the Valencian Lands). Various singers have set his poems to music.

Marta Pessarrodona was born in Terrassa (Barcelona). She is a poet, prose-writer, dramatist and screenwriter. She has extensive experience in publishing and as a lecturer and literary critic, and is a regular contributor to newspapers and magazines of articles on literature, culture and the arts. Her most recent collections of poetry include Homenatge a Walter Benjamin (1989), Tria de Poemes (1994), and L'amor a Barcelona (1998), the latter translated into Spanish by Alejandro Vardieri and published by Pen Press. Her writings have been translated into English, Spanish and Swedish. She is also author of Mercè Rodoreda i el seu temps (2005), a biography of the renowned Catalan novelist.

Francesc Parcerisas (Barcelona 1944), poet and critic, lectures in translation at the Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona. He has translated from English, French and Italian into both Spanish and Catalan (Pavese, Tolkien, Rimbaud, Pound, Heaney...). He was head of the Catalan Writers' Association, Catalan-language representative at different European translators' associations, director of the Institutió de les Lletres Catalanes (1998-2004) and recently the Catalan Government coordinator for the Year of Books and Reading 2005. His collected poems (Triomf del present) were published in 1991. His latest book is Natura morta amb nens (Still life with children) (2000).

Maria Mercè Marçal (Barcelona, 1952-1998) was a poet, translator and novelist. Her work became known in 1977 with the collection of poems Cau de llunes (Lair of Moons). She subsequently published several collections of poems, the last of which, Desglaç (Thaw), brings together the works she wrote between 1984 and 1988. She also published the novel La passió segons Renée Vivien (Passion According to Renée Vivien), which received several critics' awards. As a translator, she contributed Catalan versions of works of Colette, Yourcenar and Leonor Fini. Apart from being an active participant in Catalan literary circles, she was also politically active and engaged in social movements as a feminist.

Manuel Forcano has a doctorate in Semitic Language and Literature. He completed his Hebrew studies in Israel and studied Arabic in Syria and Egypt. He has worked as a lecturer in Hebrew and Aramaic at the University of Barcelona and taught Hebrew (from 1992 to 1998) at the Association of Cultural Relations Catalonia-Israel, and at the University of Girona (1995). He also translated Hebrew poetry into Catalan, for example the work of the poets Pinkhas Sade, Roni Someck and Yehuda Amichai. He has also translated E.M. Forster. He has recently published, along with Margarita Castells, a translation into Catalan of Ibn Battuta's The Journeys of Ibn Battuta.

Melcior Mateu was born in Barcelona in 1971. His first book of poems, Vida evident, was awarded the Octavio Paz Poetry Award in 1998. In Ningú, petit (2002) he renders a tribute to Little Nemo, the early 20th century comic-strip character by Winsor McCay. Jardí amb cangurs (2005) is his most recent book. He has translated into Catalan authors such as John Ashbery and Michael Ondaatje. In 1997 he earned his MA in Comparative Literature from Cornell University and he is currently pursuing his PhD at NYU.

Design and layout: Eumogràfic

First published: February 2006

© the authors, for the texts

© D. Sam Abrams, Magda Beglin, Angela Buxton, Cyrus Cassells, Theo Dorgan, Hillary Gardner, Pearse Hutchinson, Adela Robles-Sáez, David H. Rosenthal, Arthur Terry and Julie Wark, for the translations

Institut Ramon Llull
Diputació, 279
E-08007 Barcelona
www.llull.com
irl@llull.com

Impressió: Copyset